A Young Actress Dies.

St. Louis Mo., July 18:—The theatrical ambitions of 18-year-old Eva McManus, who had risen from the Orpheum Stock Company to head her own company on the road, were sadly ended by death, the cause of which, according to a coroner's verdict yesterday, was blood poisoning. Her sudden death also forestalled her marriage to Herschell Brinkerhoff of Salem, Ill. He is a vaudeville actor and they had planned, after their wedding this fall, to act together as a vaudeville team.

The daughter of Mrs. Sadie White of 3420 Thomas street, Miss McManus displayed a talent for dancing and character impersonations while still in short dresses. Her first engagements were on moving picture theatre programs.

Last winter she became a member of the Princess Theater Co., playing character parts and doing a solo song and dance. Her success encouraged her at the beginning of the year to organize a troupe of her own and to play a circuit of small towns.

A week ago she was taken ill and consulted Dr. Upshaw of 5015 Shaw avenue, who diagnosed the case as one of peritonitis. Dr. G. O. Gauen of 815 North Jefferson avenue was called in consultation and the young actress was removed to the Lutheran Hospital for an operation. She seemed to be recovering, but on Thursday suffered a relapse and died the next day.

Brinkerhoff arrived in the city last night to attend the funeral. Miss McManus had signed a contract to join the Orpheum players next Monday night now showing at the Orpheum Theatre here.

Gov. Major was in St. Louis, a guest at the Press Club's Carnival.

The Supreme Court has not ruled on the validity of the Orr Insurance law, as the merits of that extraordinary statute were not involved in the injunction proceedings against the fire insurance companies; but the people have passed judgment upon that statute and they have concluded that the legislature that passed the act, and the Governor who signed it, as well as the Democratic politicians who promoted it, blundered badly. There was no excuse for such a drastic and unreasonable statute, however much need there might have been for a new and a strong fire insurance law.

The people of this State are not against the railroads. They want established roads to make money and they want them to furnish good service to the public and pay good wages, but they are against anything and everything that compels the collection of higher rates than the people of other States pay.
